Forensic Archaeologist and D.V.I Specialist
Nepal

Sharmila Gurung is an accomplished professional with extensive experience in project coordination, operations management, and community engagement. With a passion for fostering sustainable development and empowering marginalized communities, Sharmila has made significant contributions to various initiatives aimed at promoting education, vocational training, and resilience building.

As a former member of the team at Daya Foundation in Nepal, Sharmila played a pivotal role in executing projects that aimed to empower marginalized communities and promote education and vocational training opportunities. Her expertise in project coordination, community engagement, and operations management was instrumental in the successful implementation of various initiatives.

Prior to her role at Daya Foundation, Sharmila gained valuable experience working within international organizations, where she contributed to humanitarian initiatives and provided support for forensic programs. Her commitment to promoting dignity, resilience, and human rights has been evident throughout her career.

In the aftermath of the devastating earthquake that struck Nepal in 2015, Sharmila exhibited exceptional dedication and resilience by tirelessly assessing and managing safety concerns in various physical infrastructures. Working alongside a team of experts, she conducted thorough inspections to identify hazards and risks, coordinating with local authorities and humanitarian organizations to prioritize safety measures and implement necessary repairs. Additionally, Sharmila played a pivotal role in empowering communities with disaster preparedness training, ensuring they had the knowledge and skills to respond effectively to future disasters. Her proactive approach and unwavering commitment to safety and resilience were instrumental in helping communities navigate the challenges posed by the earthquake aftermath.

Currently pursuing a Master's degree in Psychology, Sharmila's academic pursuits complement her practical experience, enhancing her ability to understand and address the complex challenges facing communities and organizations globally. She is deeply engaged in humanitarian work and is an active member of esteemed organizations such as the Nepal Red Cross Society, where she continues to make a positive impact.

Sharmila Gurung is available for consulting, speaking engagements, and collaboration opportunities in the fields of project management, community development, and sustainable development.
